Our customers want the invisible. They demand a unique image for their brand that no one has created before. This is the philosophy of Marmalade, a German production studio that is famous for capturing some of the most stunning, high-speed photography behind advertising. They create surreal images of the flow of milk chocolate colliding with dark chocolate in the air, or the perfect, effervescent beer hitting the frosty glass with all the force of the class five rapids of white water. Now, look, I know that this clip glorified the ad for their production services, but what an ad! It's like a wonderland for pictures of nerds, from their production room full of artificial cheeses, candy and fruit to their incredible industrial robot arm that tracks and pans shots as if it's building a performance car. You get a peek into the practical setup of some of the most advanced photography in the world. And before watching this clip? I'm ashamed to say I'd labeled about half the shots as CGI. Adam Glasser is perhaps better known as his alter ego, Seymour Butts. And for good reason: Glasser (Butts?) has been working in the adult entertainment industry since the early 90's. During his career he produced, directed and starred in more than 140 adult films. Naturally, he pulled out of his vast sexual experience while writing his book, Rock Her World: Sex Guide to Modern Man, recently published by Gotham Books. (Read a review of it here). Below, Men's Health interviews Glasser about what he knows best: women and sex. Men's Health: What advice, above all, would you have for men? Adam Glasser: Being able to communicate what you want from your sexual relationship is as important as being able to be a good listener and create an atmosphere where your partner feels as if they can say everything they have to tell you. I think it all starts with communication. Bonus Tip from Men's Health: How is it for communication? The 30 hottest things to say to a. MH: Why did you decide to write a book? AG: Indeed, it was somewhat selfish of me in the sense that throughout my career, especially after my TV show Family Business aired for four seasons on Showtime, I received a lot of emails and emails from men and women, but especially men, with many questions about sex and relationships and women. And unlike answering all these emails, I thought it would be convenient to write a book with all these answers in it. MH: How did women react? AG: Women reacted surprisingly well - I think they have their reasons. They want to know what men are saying about sex. Many women buy it for their men. It's not just a sex guide, it's part memoir, part sex guide. the stories are funny and in fact often probably disgusting in some ways. I think the point is that they come from an honest place; I think that's why both men and women treat them. MH: What advice would you give women? AG: You'll have to read this in my next book. (Laughs) I don't know what to do. MH: Is this your next project - a sex guide for women? AG: That's one of the thoughts I'm giving around, yes. A book equal to the book I wrote for men. MH: What are the most common questions men ask you? AG: Men seemed particularly interested in how to last longer; they were particularly interested in questions about penis size; they seem interested in female ejaculation and it's all about how it works. From a female point of view, many women have written to me saying how I can learn ejaculate, how can I get my husband or friend to make me ejaculate. Related tip from men's health: 10 ways to last longer in a MH bed: Is anyone particularly surprising to fan mail? AG: I remember one of them, from the pastor's wife, where she wrote me a letter saying, Hey, do you have any suggestions on how I might interest my husband with my Mr. Stain and female ejaculation? And while I did the formation of the tape, female ejaculation; Complete guide. I sent her on video and I got an email from her saying basically, Thank God! I'm a squinter! My husband did it, we found out and it was great! I even have people coming up to me on the street, say, a man and a woman. And he'll say something like: We had sex for the first time last night -- and it's fantastic! And the woman smiles and shakes her head, and she says, Yes, yes, that's great. Bonus tip from men's health: Find out the truth about the g-spot. MH: How is your sex guide modern? What is the difference between 2010 and 2010? AG: For men, times are changing, and a lot of attention is paid to sexual activity. Nowadays women feel more empowered than ever to discuss these things either with their friends and even more so in the general public, on their Facebook pages, or their MySpace pages, saying: Hey, John just left and he was the lamest sex I've ever had, or I can't believe how small this guy's penis was. Who knows what they write! But there is more pressure than ever before for men to have some sexual skills and be able to perform and satisfy women because there is no more getting with whom bam thank you ma'am. Otherwise you'll be called for it. Bonus tip from Men's Health: Follow these sex tips to make sure she is always satisfied. Read 50 of the hottest men's health sex tips ever. MH: How is the task of writing a book compared to your previous job in adult entertainment? AG: I thought I was doing an honorable thing by refusing to ghost a writer, but in hindsight, the task of writing a book is much greater than I imagined it ... And the whole editing process was unexpected. They wanted to cut out a joke because they didn't want to offend the offending after dealing with the world of adult entertainment, where censorship is a serious problem, I don't think I would experience so much in writing. But even with the written word, they are still careful about what is put out there. MH: Have you ever talked about this with your son? AG: He's 13 years old, and he's just interested in girls. And of course I talked to him as far as the rule is about sex and stuff, and trying to open a line of communication with him. I have to keep it kind of light. You know, I'm sitting here wondering if 13 is too young to go to the movies with a girl, and you know, I'm discussing this. I think it's kind of a Pandora's box opening - no pun intended. MH: What does your son think of your career? AG: Now he's telling people I'm the director of obscure films. I think he's probably more fascinated than I know because he doesn't really talk about it. He knows what I'm doing. He knows that these materials are not for him at the moment, he knows that when he is 18 he will have access to all the materials he wants and more. We draw a very clear line in this house between work and the rest of our lives because with what I do, we have to.
